Ron Paul suspends US presidential campaigning

WASHINGTON (AFP) - Ron Paul, the US congressman who led a stubbornly persistent presidential bid against presumptive Republican nominee Mitt Romney and other rivals, said yesterday he is suspending active campaigning.

Paul said in a statement he will "no longer spend resources campaigning in primaries," opting instead to work on amassing delegates to the party's national convention, even though his chances of winning the nomination are virtually nil.

Paul insists his team "will continue to work in the state convention process" and seek to win delegates in order to "carry a strong message" to the Republican National Convention in Tampa, Florida in late August.

A Republican candidate needs 1,144 delegates in order to be declared the nominee. Romney has some 949, according to a count by respected website RealClear-Politics, and is expected to wrap up the nomination on May 29 when he wins the Texas primary.

Bringing beautiful smiles to Aruban faces: Dr. John Walker DDS and upcoming conference with Dr. Cesar Guerrero DDS.

Thursday, May 17, Dr. John Walker, DDS, originally of Boston, but who also practices advanced orthodontia on Aruba, will host a seminar with noted maxillofacial surgeon and specialist in orthognathics, Dr. Cesar A. Guerrero, DDS. His expertise is surgery to correct conditions of the jaw and face related to structure, growth, sleep apnea, TMJ disorders, malocclusion problems owing to skeletal disharmonies, or other orthodontic problems that cannot be easily treated with braces.

Dr. Walker describes Dr. Guerrero, from Caracas, as "a visionary and absolutely at the top of his field; considered one of the finest surgeons in the world." Dr. Guerrero sports an impressive resume, and is on the staff of Southwestern Medical School, University of Texas Health Sciences Center, Dallas, Parkland Memorial Hospital and Associated Hospitals, as well as Director of the Santa Rosa Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery Center. He is greatly in demand as a speaker and has authored some important tomes on the maxillofacial surgery.

NATO protesters arrested in Chicago before summit

CHICAGO (AFP) - Eight NATO protesters were arrested yesterday ahead of a weekend summit when they refused to leave the Chicago office tower which houses President Barack Obama's campaign headquarters, police said.

About 100 people attended the rally but only eight refused to leave and were taken into custody on trespassing charges.

Thousands of protesters are expected to descend upon the Windy City as the leaders of 50 countries gather for a NATO summit on Sunday and Monday.

Consumer Confidence Survey – May 2012

IRANJESTAD -- During the period of March 26 through April 12, 2012, the Centrale Bank van Aruba (CBA) conducted the first quarterly Consumer Confidence Survey (CCS). The principle aim of the CCS is to provide the CBA with valuable information for its macro-economic analyses and forecasts, as well as for determining the sentiments of Aruban consumers, which will further the CBA's understanding of economic developments. The CCS consisted of 20 short multiple-choice questions on the population's opinion of and expectation on the state of the Aruban economy and on its spending habit.

The CCS approached 400 persons covering different parts of Aruba. The preliminary results for the first quarter of 2012 show that 34.0 percent of respondents felt that their personal financial position had worsened when compared to 6 months ago. On the other hand, 33.8 percent expected their personal financial position would improve in the next 6 months. Also, 57.8 percent stated Aruba's business and economic conditions deteriorated compared to 6 months ago, while 32.3 percent of respondents said that business and economic conditions would continue worsening in the next 6 months.

On job expectations, people believed that it was harder to find a job than 6 months ago (64.3 percent of respondents). In the next 6 months, it would either become harder (48.0 percent) or remain as difficult (24.3 per-

Respondents pointed out that buying a car (64.0 percent), acquiring a major appliance (51.5 percent) and going on vacation (49.8 percent) were unsuitable at the time of the interview. Only 16.5 percent considered it appropriate to take out a loan and 13.8 percent believed it was suitable to take out a mortgage loan.

The CBA created a consumer confidence index to summarize the results of the CCS in a single indicator. The index varies between 90 and 110, where scores between 90-99 indicate a negative view of consumers. Scores between 101 and 110 show a positive consumer view. A score of 100 indicates that respondents reported no change in their view. The results show respondents had a negative view during the first quarter (index score of 96.2).

The CBA has scheduled the next CCS for the period of June 25 through July 06, 2012. You can download the complete presentation of the results from the CBA's website. For further information, please contact Ms. Elmelynn Croes (telephone:5252230; email: e.croes@cbaruba.org) or Mr. Jonathan Upegui (telephone: 5252215; email: j.upegui@ cbaruba.org) of the Research Department.

Colombia Red Cross hopeful on French reporter's release

BOGOTA (AFP) - A Red Cross official in Colombia said Monday he was optimistic about the release of kidnapped French journalist Romeo Langlois by FARC rebels, urging them to free him "as soon as possible."

"We are very optimistic and are now awaiting a speedy resolution," said Daniel Munoz, head of the International Committee of the Red Cross Caqueta.

"As we have said all along, this cannot go on. Romeo Langlois is hurt and must be released and returned to his family right away," after a FARC message announced the group's intention to free Langlois. This is why we insist that this process takes place as soon and quickly as possible," Munoz added

In Memory of Jorge Guastavino

When the news of the passing of Jorge Guastavino at the respectable age of 92 years, reached us on the 8th of May, our thoughts went way back into the past of the history of the Aruba YMCA, which carries the distinct mark of Don Jorge.

It is no secret that the greater part of the history of the YMCA in Aruba is tied to the actions, interventions, accomplishments, guidance and management of Jorge Guastavino. Guastavino came to Aruba from his native Santiago de Chile where he was born on the 10th of November 1919. He lived on Aruba since 1967 and for more than 30 years served as General Secretary of the Aruba YMCA, directing this young people's organization in a most admirable manner. Aruba International Film Festival expands its Film Lab 96 Hours ORANJESTAD -- The Aruba International Film Festival has announced that it will offer opportunities for interested adults to learn about film and video production in an expanded weeklong film lab.

After a successful launch in 2011, this year's AIFF Film Lab -96 Hours- will not only be longer, but will include courses in acting and writing for the camera, in addition to the popular film production course offered last year. Retuning students are also being offered an advanced course in production and editing, taking them beyond last years program, along with the new subject matter.

The course is designed to be very hands-on; students will be involved in all phases of filmmaking, from conceptualization to final presentation. Under the tutelage of a trio of experienced film educators they will write, perform, film and edit short videos. These videos will be shown at a special screening on the final day of the film festival. Classes will be very intense, beginning at 9 am and ending in the midafternoon with additional "after school" assignments. The ballroom of the Hyatt Hotel in Palm Beach will become a classroom, and the film festival provides the necessary equipment.

According to lead instructor Darrell Wilson, "Bring just yourself, lots of energy and all your creativity to the AIFF 96 Hours Lab. If you have a video camera, please bring it along. If not, we'll share. A laptop computer will be valuable for editing your work."

Interested participants should expect to dedicate the week to the training. The projects developed during the lab will address some aspect of the island and culture of Aruba as the subject matter.

Wilson is a full time professor at the prestigious NYU film school, as is Daniel Heffernan, who will be working with the returning students on directing and advanced editing techniques. The third instructor is Maureen Heffernan, who has taken time from her busy schedule to come to Aruba and round out the team. Ms Heffernan is the educational director for Young Audiences New Jersey, the largest of this kind of federally funded organization in the United States. She is widely regarded as a leading arts educator in the state of New Jersey.

For more information about the AIFF 96 Hours Lab and to register online, visit the AIFF website at www.arubainternationalfilm-festival.com.

Dr. Walker and book co authored by Dr. Guerrero

Dr. Walker has been practicing orthodontia on Aruba for the past 13 years; increasing his time on island from 2-3days a month to an average of 2 weeks spent correcting dental and jaw irregularities. He has created a state of the art diagnostic and treatment center at Julianastraat 4, with equipment that is the most advanced in the Caribbean. He continues to maintain his position as a professor on the faculty of Boston University in Clinical Orthodontics, splitting his time equally between Boston and his Aruban practice.

Dr. Walker is particularly pleased that AZV, Aruba's national health plan, is on board with the collaborative program with Dr. Guerrero for treatment at his clinic in Venezeula of Aruban patients needing his specialized care. "Between our diagnostic facility and presurgery orthodontics we provide at my clinic and then the level of surgical care from Dr. Guerrero, Aruban patients requiring specialized procedures and techniques can be completely confident they will be getting the most advanced and expert care possible."

Dr. Guerrero will not be the first speaker Dr. Walker has brought to his International Center for Continuing Education; he is expecting a number of medical doctors as well as island dentists to attend this week's program. "What we are doing here has far greater impact than the appearance of the jaw and face and facilitating the ability to chew properly. The ramifications of an improper jaw formation affect general health." An example is the inability to chew without pain will lead individuals to choose soft foods over protein rich items such as meats and poultry, resulting in a highcarb diet, which can result in being overweight and very possibly diabetes. "It is all connected," he asserts.

Thursday's presentation will take place in classrooms within the same complex as Dr. Walker's office in Oranjestad, which also contains the Consulate of the Dominican Republic. The program will be from 4:00 to 7:00 PM; interested parties can contact Dr. Walker's office at 582-6760 about attending the current seminar.

Dutch 'distaste' at revelation that royals were baptized as Mormons by proxy

UTRECHT, The Netherlands --There is public criticism in the Netherlands of the Mormon practice of baptism by proxy after a Dutch newspaper revealed May 9 that several members of the royal family were posthumously "baptized" into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, colloquially known as the Mormon church.

The daily newspaper Trouw quoted unpublished documents in the Mormon church's global genealogical database that show the late Queen Juliana, her husband Prince Bernhard and Queen Beatrix's late husband Prince Claus were all baptized as Mormons after their deaths.

Mormons believe the proxy baptism ritual allows deceased people from other religions to enter the afterlife. The church has urged Mormons only to posthumously baptize their own ancestors.

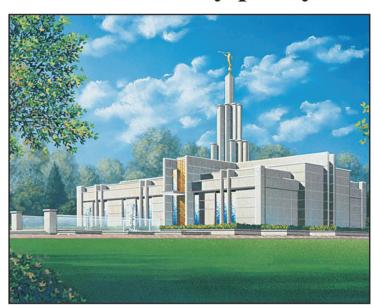

However, last February, Jewish and Hindu groups reacted with anger at revelations that Jewish Holocaust victim Anne Frank, Indian independence leader Mahatma Gandhi and the parents of Nazi-hunter Simon Wiesenthal had been baptized Mormons by proxy.

Some Dutch parliamentarians are calling on Home Affairs Minister Liesbeth Spies to counsel regional government archives against cooperating with the Mormon church, Trouw reported May 10.

The denomination has made an offer to the country's 12 provinces to digitally scan all their births, marriages and deaths records for use on computers, free of charge. However, the aim of this is to collect more names to baptize by proxy, Trouw said.

Parliamentarian Anja Hazekamp has tabled parliamentary questions, asking the home affairs minister how cooperation with the Mormon church for cost-cutting ends can be reconciled with the right to privacy.

Archivists too are debating whether financial or ethical concerns should prevail. The province of Gelderland has agreed to have the Mormon church digitalize its archives, but Utrecht has refused and Overijssel has doubts.

The Mormon Church in the Netherlands will examine the possibility of setting up a register of people who do not want to be posthumously baptized, spokesman Hans Boom told the public broadcaster NOS on May 10.

At present, it is not possible for the Mormon Church to guarantee someone that they will not be posthumously baptized, he said.

Boom told the NOS that he will discuss the opt-out scheme with the denomination's global leadership in the United States. The baptism of Prince Claus took place two years after his death in 2002, at a Mormon temple in Brazil. This may have been done by "over-enthusiastic members," Boom told Trouw, adding it was a "gesture of love."

Prominent Dutch theologian Huub Oosterhuis, who preached at Prince Claus's funeral, called the posthumous baptism of the Dutch royals "tasteless."

The Mormon Church in the Netherlands on its website republished on May 9 an earlier statement, dated February 21, 2012, in which it rejected baptism by proxy of Holocaust victims.

The statement concludes:

"It worries us when someone deliberately violates the church's policy, whereby s o m e - thing that should be seen as an offering of love and respect, gives rise to conflict."

In an May 11 editorial,
Trouw points out that the Mormon practice of posthumous baptism is well-known and that Mormons are not violating any rules in accessing publicly available data. "Privacy rules are formally only for the living." However, "it would be good if those of us who are alive are already given the opportunity of registering somewhere that under no circumstance will this posthumous act of charity be appreciated."

Furthermore, public authorities can be expected to digitalize their files themselves.
"It would demonstrate good trusteeship and respect for deceased citizens if public records are not handed over in their entirety to organizations that want to use them for other purposes." The Dutch government's information service has not reacted to the newspaper revelation of the Mormon baptisms of members of the royal family.

The church says there are about 9,000 Mormons in the Netherlands. The only Mormon temple in the country is in Zoetermeer, near The Hague.

Much deserved praise and recognition for Aruba's nurses on Nurses Day

Last Friday, Aruba's Dr. Horacio Oduber Hospital celebrated International Nurses Day with a special treat from the Hospital's management for all

The Minister of Public Health treated the nurses with an appel conveying the message that eating healthy is of utmost importance.

Dr. Jaime Falconi, director of the Hospital saluted our nurses and indicated that the International Nurses Day is a time to reflect on the valuable and hard work of nursing and on the sacrifices that nurses make in the course of their work. Falconi reported that the work of nursing is becoming much more demanding which makes it imperative for nurses to keep abreast of what's happening in the world of medicine. The director of Aruba's hospital indicated that Aruba needs many more nurses on all levels, both basic nurses and specialized nurses.

The Hospital is currently offering a special course of training where nurses can upgrade themselves and increase their knowledge and expertise in the area of intensive care. According to Falconi, the need to have more nurses incorporated in the nursing profession is enormous and that they are doing everything possible to start with information campaigns to stimulate more interest in the study of the nursing profes-

The Minister of Public Health remarked that we as a community must recognize our nurses as very special people who care for our sick every day. They deserve to be valued and respected. All in all our nurses received much deserved attention and recognition on their special day.

Congratulations to all our nurses, we value and revere everyone of you. May God give you the strength and wisdom to carry on your noble service!

Dozens killed in Syria, Saudi doubts Annan peace plan

DAMASCUS (AFP) - Syrian troops yesterday pushed an assault on a central rebel bastion, with dozens reportedly killed across the country, as Saudi Arabia warned that Kofi Annan's peace efforts appeared to be failing.

The EU, meanwhile, slapped fresh sanctions on Damascus, while Russia said it was "absolutely clear" Al-Qaeda was behind last week's twin bomb attacks in Damascus that killed 55 people and vowed to continue to arm the regime.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said three troop carriers were destroyed in clashes that erupted at dawn on the outskirts of Rastan, a rebelheld city in restive Homs province of central Syria. At least 23 soldiers were killed in the Rastan clashes, it said.

Four rebel fighters, among them a lieutenant who defected, also died in the fighting, and random regime gunfire reportedly left two civilians dead in the nearby city of Homs.

Regime forces launched an offensive on Rastan at the weekend, encountering heavy resistance from rebels seeking the ouster of President Bashar al-Assad's regime.

"The regime forces in the course of two hours fired 300 rockets at Rastan before launching their assault," Sami Kurdi, a spokesman for the rebel Free Syrian Army, told AFP from Rastan.

The Observatory also reported deadly violence elsewhere yesterday, with three civilians killed by regime forces' gunfire in southern Daraa province, including a child and a Palestinian refugee.

And in Quraya in the eastern province of Deir Ezzor, a 15-year-old boy was killed by machinegun fire as regime forces raided the town, the Observatory said, bringing to at least 33 the number of people reportedly killed yesterday.

The bloodshed comes despite a month-old ceasefire brokered by UN-Arab League envoy Annan as part of a plan aimed at ending violence that has swept Syria since March 2011 when a popular revolt erupted against Assad's regime.

Part of the plan includes the deployment in flashpoint areas of around 300 UN military observers. By Sunday, 189 observers were on the ground, the UN mission in Syria said.

In Riyadh, Saudi Arabia's foreign minister warned on yesterday that confidence in Annan's peace mission was fading fast because of the relentless bloodshed.

More than 12,000 people, the majority of them civilians, have died since the Syrian uprising began, according to the Observatory, including more than 900 killed since the April 12 truce.

On the diplomatic front, EU foreign ministers meeting in Brussels yesterday slapped a 15th round of sanctions on Syria.

The new European Union sanctions, to take effect on toay, mean 128 people and 43 firms or utilities are now targeted by an assets freeze and travel ban for backing the regime's 14-month campaign of relentless repression.

Mladic seeks six-month delay in war crimes trial

THE HAGUE (AFP) -Lawyers for Bosnian Serb exarmy chief Ratko Mladic yesterday sought a six-month adjournment of his war crimes trial at the International Criminal Court, two days before the hearing was due to open.

Mladic, 70, stands accused of carrying out a brutal campaign of ethnic cleansing and the massacre of Muslims at Srebrenica, Europe's worst atrocity since Nazi rule.

He has been indicted on 11 counts of genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity for his role in the Balkan country's 1992-95 war which left 100,000 people dead and 2.2 million homeless.

But ahead of the trial due to open in The Hague tomorrow, his lawyers said they have not been given enough time to examine certain documents and that they required more time to prepare his defence.

"The defence respectfully requests an adjournment and continuance of trial for six months, or in the alternative, that the chamber bar the prosecution from utilising at trial any exhibit or witness that was the subject of late disclosure," lawyers Branko Lukic and Miodrag Stojanovic said in a statement.

Ratko Mladic

On Friday, the defence had objected to judge Alphonse Orie, saying he was not impartial as he had previously sentenced several of Mladic's subordinates.

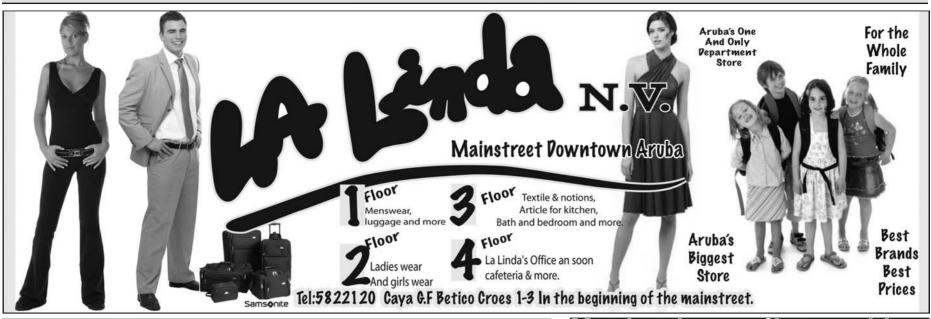

Dubbed the "Butcher of Bosnia", Mladic is accused over the slaughter at Srebrenica where almost 8,000 Muslim men and boys were systematically murdered in July 1995.

Prosecutors also hold him responsible for the 44-month siege of Sarajevo where his forces waged a "terror campaign" of sniping and shelling that left 10,000 civilians dead.

It was in pursuit of a "Greater Serbia" that Mladic allegedly ordered his troops to "cleanse" Bosnian towns, driving out Croats, Muslims and other non-Serb residents.

After the war, Mladic continued his military career but went into hiding in 2000 after then Serbian president Slobodan Milosevic's government fell

We won, he lost,' tells a woman wounded by Breivik in Oslo court

OSLO (AFP) - Young Norwegians wounded in Anders Behring Breivik's shooting rampage testified for the first time Monday about how he coldly hunted them down, and used the trial to taunt the self-confessed killer.

"We won, he lost. Young Norwegians know how to swim," Frida Holm Skoglund, 20, told Oslo district court when asked if she had anything she wanted to say to Breivik.

In a change from the sobs that have so often filled Courtroom 250 since the 33-year-old right-wing extremist's trial began on April 16 over the killing of 77 people, Skoglund's words drew discreet laughter from the audience.

Rebekah Brooks to hear if she faces UK hacking charges

LONDON(AFP) - Former Rupert Murdoch confidante Rebekah Brooks and her husband will find out on Tuesday if they are to face the first charges resulting from Britain's phonehacking scandal, her lawyer said.

Brooks and her husband Charlie, a former racehorse trainer, will find out after answering bail whether they will be charged with perverting the course of justice, her lawyer Stephen Parkinson confirmed to AFP on Monday.

Five other suspects including former News International head of security Mark Hanna will also learn their fate, the Press Association news agency reported, citing unnamed sources.

The Crown Prosecution Service refused to comment.

Brooks, 43, resigned as head of Murdoch's British newspaper wing News International in July, days after the closure of the scandal-hit News of the World tabloid.

She and her husband were arrested in March on suspicion of perverting the course of justice. Brooks was initially arrested in July over separate allegations of phone-hacking and bribing public officials.

In April, prosecutors said police had handed them a file relating to allegations against one journalist and six members of the public on perverting the course of justice.

Police have made more than 40 arrests since launching a huge new investigation into phone-hacking and bribery in January 2011 but there have been no charges to date from the probe.

Å News of the World journalist and a private detective were jailed for hacking in 2007 but the paper insisted they were rogue operators.

Last Friday Brooks, who also edited the News of the World from 2000 to 2003, testified to a press ethics inquiry about her close relationship with Prime Minister David Cameron.

Breivik's killing spree on the island of Utoeya on July 22, and how she herself had pulled out the bullet.

To escape Breivik, the young woman and several friends dived into the icy water surrounding the small heart-shaped island, and she recalled seeing the killer, dressed as a police officer, standing on shore shooting at the people swimming away as he shouted: "Stop! Come back!"

Breivik has been charged with committing terrorist acts when he first bombed a government building in Oslo, killing eight people, before shooting dead another 69 in the July 22 rampage on Utoeya, where the ruling Labour Party's youth wing was hosting a summer camp.

Most of the victims there were in their teens, the youngest having just celebrated her 14th birthday.

Breivik has confessed to the acts but has refused to plead guilty, insisting they were "cruel but necessary" to stop the Labour Party's "multicultural experiment" and the "Muslim invasion" of Norway and other European countries.

While Breivik is expected to be found guilty, his 10-week trial will help determine the tricky question of his sanity and whether he will be sent to prison or to a mental institution.

If the court finds him sane, Breivik will face Norway's maximum 21-year prison sentence, but that term can be extended for as long as he is considered a threat to society.

If he is found criminally insane however, he will be sent to a closed psychiatric care unit for treatment -- a fate Breivik, who is intent upon showing that his anti-Islam ideology is not the ravings of a lunatic, has described as "worse than death".

Mexico journalist working on PRI campaign killed

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AFP) - A Mexican journalist who had taken a leave of absence to work on the campaign of presidential frontrunner Enrique Pena Nieto was killed at the weekend, prosecutors said Monday.

The body of 43-year-old Rene Orta Salgado was found on Sunday in the trunk of his car in the central state of Morelos. His face was covered with a scarf and the body did not have any apparent gunshot wounds, prosecutors said.

Until December, Orta Salgado worked for the newspaper El Sol de Cuernavaca in the city of the same name, located 90 kilometers (55 miles) south of the capital Mexico City.

At that time, according to sources at the newspaper, he asked for a leave of absence so he could work on the campaign of the former long-time ruling

Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI).

Pena Nieto is the party's candidate for the presidency and is the favorite ahead of the July 1 polls.

Several journalists have been killed in recent weeks in Mexico, primarily in the state of Veracruz, where a war is raging between rival drug cartels.

In late April, a correspondent for the national weekly news magazine Proceso was found strangled in her home.

And early this month, the dismembered bodies of three photographers and a news company employee were found, wrapped in plastic bags, in a canal in the metropolitan area of Veracruz, a port city on the Gulf of Mexico.

Mexico is considered to be one of the most dangerous countries in the world for reporters.

Italian gangster's tomb exhumed in search for mystery girl

ROME (AFP) - The tomb of an Italian gangster in a Rome church was exhumed on Monday in search of clues on the disappearance of a Vatican employee's daughter in a conspiracy-filled inquiry that has gripped Italy.

Enrico de Pedis, the leader of the Magliana gang which terrified Rome in the 1970s and 1980s, was killed in 1990 and buried in a basilica -- a rare privilege seen as due to his dubious Vatican financial connections.

Emanuela Orlandi, whose father worked in the Vatican prefecture, disappeared on June 22, 1983 at the age of 15 and her fate has remained a mystery which conspiracy theorists have linked to a settling of accounts in the Vatican.

De Pedis's mistress claimed he was involved in the kidnapping and murder of Orlandi and an anonymous caller on a television chat show in 2005 made the claim that the gangster's tomb contained clues about Orlandi.

Officials on Monday said that preliminary tests had shown the coffin contained only the remains of De Pedis, Italian media reported, but it appears this will do little to dampen the air of intrigue on the case.

"Today is an important step towards resolving this mystery that has lasted for years," Orlandi's brother Pietro told reporters. "Maybe after so many years there is finally a willingness to clear this up. ."

The Vatican gave the goahead for the exhumation of the coffin and the mafia boss will now be buried in a Rome cemetery in the coming days.

Medical tourism sets pulses racing

(AFP) - From liposuction in Athens to an eye operation in Dubai, the lucrative market in medical tourism is on the up, tempting ever more countries to look for ways to profit from foreign patient care.

"Everyone wants their share of the pie," Sanjiv Malik, director of DM Healthcare, a Dubai-based network of hospitals, said at a recent conference on medical tourism attended by more than 300 professionals here.

The "pie" is getting bigger. Nearly three million patients go abroad for medical treatment every year.

Turnover is expected to total 100 billion dollars in 2012, compared with 79 billion in 2010, and increase to 130 billion by 2015, according to global consultancy firm, KPMG.

The flows of medical tourists looking for cheaper and often quicker treatment than they can receive at home are traditionally well defined.

Mexico draws US patients.

while Thailand, India or Malaysia are the key destinations for Asians, and Hungarian dental care tends to be highly sought-after generally.

Germany draws wealthy Russians as well as nationals from the Gulf; well-off Africans go to France for medical care while residents of Latin America go to the US city of Miami.

Keith Pollard, of the specialist internet site Treatment Abroad, said that, generally speaking, "medical tourism is not global, it's regional".

However a growing number of countries and hospitals are aiming to turn it global.

In Turkey "the government has taken the initiative to be one of the players" in a market which until now was dominated by the private sector, said Emin Cakmak, head of the Turkish medical tourism committee.

It has launched a demolition programme of old hospitals replacing them with facilities mostly destined for VIRUNGA NATIONAL PARK, Democratic Republic of the Congo: United Nations troops have set up a base on May 13, 2012 just outside the gates of the Virunga national park headquarters or Rumangabo, which is also at the entrance of the road to Bukima, one of our patrol posts in the gorilla sector. The UN camp was set up on the football pitch, and a large group of children and adults came out to observe them. The Virunga national park is home to more than a quarter of the world's remaining 790 critically endangered mountain gorillas. Seven of the eight volcanoes in the Virunga range lie within the park, including Nyiragongo, one of the most beautiful and active volcanoes in the world. To the north stand the snow-capped majestic Rwenzori Mountains, over 5000 meters high.

foreigners, likely to be patients from Arab and Gulf states.

Dubai, keen to attract custom from neighbouring countries, has its own "medical zone".

But Pollard warned that Dubai's chances of success could be limited, identifying a problem that was common to other small countries wanting to become medical tourism destinations.

"Lots of Arab patients travel to Germany or the UK. Why? Because Germany has an 80 million population, doctors can practice, do research and get grants," he said.

Christian Ott-Sessay, of the German hospital group, Vivantes, acknowledges that competition is stiff.

Vivantes is in the throes of equipping some of its Berlin clinics with "comfort rooms" for foreign patients with hotel staff to take care of their non-medical needs.

Berlin has also set up a hotline for visiting patients and especially their families to help them quickly organise non-medical tourism activities such as a shopping trip or visit to a museum.

Health Tip: When Baby Has a Fever

The American Academy of Pediatricians offers these guidelines:

--You must call your pediatrician immediately if your infant is age 2 months or younger, with a rectal temperature of 100.4 degrees Fahrenheit or higher.

--Call the doctor if your child is between 3 months and 6 months old with a fever of 101 degrees or higher, or if baby is older than 6 months with a fever of 103 degrees or higher.

--Except for these cases, judge your child's symptoms and call the doctor if your child has a severe sore throat or earache, cough or a rash.

--Call the doctor if your child has a fever with diarrhea or vomiting, is very fussy or is sleeping excessively.

--If a fever persists in a child older than 1 year for longer than 24 hours, even if there are no other symptoms, call the pediatrician.

Measles kills 12 children in Pakistan tribal area

MIRANSHAH (AFP) - A measles outbreak has killed 12 children in one of Pakistan's lawless tribal districts and is spreading as fighting, power cuts and curfews cause a vaccine shortage, doctors said Monday.

North Waziristan, a restive and deeply poor area bordering Afghanistan, is Pakistan's most notorious Taliban and Al-Qaeda stronghold, hit frequently by US drone strikes targeting Islamist militants.

"For the past three weeks we are daily receiving five to 10 children suffering from measles," said doctor Mohammad Ali Shah, chief of the main hospital in Miranshah, the area's biggest town.

He would normally see only one or two deaths a year from the disease, he said.

But another doctor, Mohammad Sadiq, said 12 children and a man had died from measles in the last three weeks, and that there were up to 70 confirmed cases in hospital.

The UN children's agency UNICEF said there had been 143 measles alerts this year in Pakistan's seven-district, semi-autonomous tribal belt.

The measles virus is highly contagious and can be fatal, but can easily be prevented by proper immunisation.

However Shah said: "We do not have proper storage for measles vaccination because of long power outages and curfews and most of our stock expires due to these reasons."

Poverty and poor transport facilities mean villagers in the rugged, mountainous areas cannot come to hospitals for treatment, he added, while military operations and unrest mean vaccination teams cannot reach them.

"There is accumulation of significant number of unvaccinated children in different parts of this region which are revealing as outbreaks or alerts over time to time," said doctor Quamrul Hasan of the World Health Organization (WHO).

WHO and local health officials are to carry out a supplementary campaign in the tribal areas aimed at vaccinating more than a million children aged under 10 by the end of June, he said.

Polio vaccination campaigns in tribal areas have in the past suffered because of rumours -- sometimes spread by radio stations or from mosque loudspeakers -- they were a Western conspiracy to sterilise children to reduce the Muslim population.

But UNICEF said work had been done to tackle misconceptions and there was less suspicion of the measles vaccine, administered by injection, than of the orally-administered polio dose.

Nearly 140,000 people died of measles worldwide in 2010, according to the World Health Organisation -- 95 percent in low income countries with poor health infrastructure.

Worst drought in 50 years takes toll in northern Brazil

dried out lagoon in Brazil

SAO PAOLO - (AFP) Severe drought gripping northeastern Brazil -- the worst in a half-century -- is taking its toll on more than 1,100 towns, even triggering fighting in rural areas, local media reported Sunday.

An average of one person a day is being killed in "water wars" in rural areas, while scores of animals are wasting away before perishing, the O Globo newspaper reported over the weekend.

Short water supplies have devastated farm output, the report said, endangering the lives of local people and their livestock.

Many people in the area have lost half their livestock, and the Brazilian government has reduced forecasts for corn, soy and bean crops.

In Pernambuco, 66 municipalities are on water emergencies, rivers have run completely dry and animals looking for water in the riverbed can only find the odd muddy puddle.

Local dams in the region are running dry, and abuses are rife. In one cited example, water truck drivers make deliveries -- but only if customers promise to vote for certain local candidates.

Anti-whaling group leader ordered held in Germany

(AFP) - A German court on Monday ordered Paul Watson, the founder of marine conservation group Sea Shepherd, to remain in custody a day after his arrest on a warrant from Costa Rica.

The veteran anti-whaling campaigner, a Canadian national, was detained in Frankfurt on Sunday on charges stemming from a high seas confrontation over shark finning in 2002.

He is accused of having "put a ship's crew in danger" in the incident, a Frankfurt prosecutor said.

Watson's lawyer Oliver Wallasch said that after Monday's court hearing that his client must remain in custody until the Costa Rican extradition request is considered, adding that he did not know how long the process would take.

A media report in Australia, citing Costa Rican reports, said Watson, 61, also faced an outstanding warrant for attempted murder during the same incident.

Sea Shepherd is best known for its annual pursuit of the Japanese whaling fleet in Antarctica, using increasingly militant ways to halt the hunt.

The whaling fleet kills less than a third of the animals it planned to because of the sabotage attempts.

JPMorgan investment chief resigns after $2 bn loss

New York: AFP photo shows people walking outside JP Morgan Chase & Co headquarters in New York. Yesterday JPMorgan Chase said its chief investment officer Ina Drew was resigning in the wake of the bank's stunning $2 billion loss on derivatives trading. Drew is "retiring" after more than 30 years at the bank, JPMorgan said, but her departure comes days after the bank reported a huge "egregious" loss that came under her responsibility at the bank's chief investment officer (CIO).

WASHINGTON (AFP) - JP-Morgan Chase's chief investment officer Ina Drew resigned yesterday as the White House urged stronger industry regulation in the wake of the bank's stunning $2 billion loss on derivatives trading.

With more heads expected to roll, investors also punished JPMorgan's shares, sending them down more than two percent after Friday's 9.3 percent rout.

The White House said the loss was more evidence of the need to place tough controls on banks seen as systemically "too big to fail." The banks, led by JPMorgan's chief executive Jamie Dimon, have fought hard to block such curbs.

"This event even only reinforces why it was so important to pass Wall Street reform, why it is so important to fully implement Wall Street reform," said presidential spokesman Jay Carney.

"Ever since it passed, there's been millions and millions of dollars spent by Wall Street lobbyists to try to water down, delay, and render ineffective those rules. It only reinforces why the president was right to take on this fight and why we need to make sure it's implemented," he said.

Dimon announced yesterday that Drew, 55 and one of the highest-ranking women on Wall Street, would retire after more than 30 years at the bank.

The departure came after the bank's chief investment office (CIO), which Drew led, racked up at least $2 billion in losses in the past six weeks on trading its own assets in the complex derivatives market.

Drew had previously tendered her resignation after the extent of the losses became apparent in late April, but Dimon had refused to accept it until now, according to US media reports. She will be replaced by Matt Zames, currently head of JPMorgan's global fixed-income unit.

No mention was made in the statement of any of the other CIO officials reportedly involved in the loss.

The Wall Street Journal said two others would likely be pushed out this week: Achilles Macris, who heads the London-based desk that placed the trades, and trader Javier Martin-Artajo, a managing director on Macris's team.

Eurozone warns Greece to accept rescue rules, or risk exit

BRUSSELS (AFP) - The eurozone warned Greece yesterday to stick to its debt rescue deal or risk leaving the currency club, as deadlock in Athens and dire strains for Spanish banks returned to haunt finance minister.

Eurogroup finance ministers opened talks in Brussels from 1500 GMT, with feuding political parties in Athens under stern notice that Greece must respect the conditions of austerity and reform under a March deal for a second bailout.

The alternative, increasingly forecast by analysts and now being broached even among European Union political partners, is that Greece abandons the euro.

Spanish Foreign Minister Jose Manuel Garcia-Margallo, attending talks of chief diplomats in Brussels, stressed that membership of the eurozone depended on "complying with the rules of the game."

Jose Manuel Barroso, the head of the European Commission, still "hopes and wishes" that Greece can remain in the eurozone, his spokeswoman Pia Ahrenkilde Hansen said.

European shares sank today and the euro tumbled to the lowest point since January as markets increasingly speculated about the knock-on effects of an exit on the eurozone banking system.

"They know very well what the conditions are to get further money from the EU," said Luxembourg Finance Minister Luc Frieden.

Full compliance from the next government installed in Athens is essential, he underlined, "otherwise we could not give further financial support."

Irish central bank governor Patrick Honohan has already said that a Greek departure from the eurozone "isn't necessarily fatal" and could "technically" be managed.

Asked if Athens might somehow be afforded more time, German Finance Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble said on his arrival: "It's not about generosity towards Greece. I don't see what more could have been done in the negotiations."

Belgian Foreign Minister Didier Reynders, a former finance minister, added that 'Grexit,' as economists have taken to calling a Greek euro exit currency, would be a "catastrophe for Greece economically and socially."

However, ETX Capital trader Markus Huber said that "a Greek exit might actually be a good thing for the eurozone in the long run," allowing EU partners to focus all their energies on how to support Spain and Italy.

Nevertheless, Austria's Finance Minister Maria Fekter underlined that the EU rulebook remains unclear.

"You cannot leave the eurozone," she said. "You can leave the European Union and then you can leave the eurozone.

"Greece would have to strive towards accession again," she said.

Australian Aboriginal films light up global screen

SYDNEY, Australia (AFP) -Australians are enjoying a high profile at Cannes this year, but beyond the star power of Nicole Kidman and Kylie Minogue, the film world will be watching the ground-breaking work of Aboriginal artists.

Indigenous stories have breathed new life into the film scene Down Under, with "The Sapphires" the latest to come to international attention with a screening in official selection at the French festival that kicks off Wednesday.

Actor Deborah Mailman, who stars in the feel-good feature about an all-girl singing group plucked from a remote Aboriginal community to play for Australian troops serving in Vietnam, is delighted with the response.

"Yes, it's huge. It's a really great acknowledgement," she told AFP at the launch of Sydney's Film Festival, just days before jetting out for Europe.

Mailman is a household name in Australia for her many television roles and appearances in films such as the musical comedy "Bran Nue Dae" and the historical drama "Rabbit Proof Fence", starring Kenneth Branagh.

But the 39-year-old, who in 1998 beat Cate Blanchett and Rachel Griffiths for the Australian Film Institute award for best actress, is still excited about heading to Cannes for the first time.

From the 1980s film "Crocodile Dundee" about a knifewielding bushman to Baz Luhrmann's 2008 sweeping romantic epic "Australia", Australian films have long featured Aboriginal characters.

But a batch of films being created by indigenous artists is reinvigorating the industry, and in 2009 "Samson and Delilah", a heartbreaking love story set in a remote indigenous community, won the Camera d'Or at Cannes.

Australians will have a strong influence in France again this year, with Kidman starring in "The Paperboy" by US director Lee Daniels as well as Philip Kaufman's "Hemingway and Gellhorn", which will be shown out of competition.

Australian filmmaker Cate Shortland, whose 2004 debut feature "Somersault" was shown in Cannes, said the indigenous input is part of the reason that Australian film is performing so well.

Queensland-born Mailman, who grew up in the isolated mining town of Mount Isa, is proud of her work with indigenous artists, including a new movie about a landmark land rights case "Mabo" which is premiering at the Sydney festival.

H.K. feng shui master in court over tycoon's will Hong Kong (AFP) - A Hong Kong feng shui master accused of forging the will of late property tycoon Nina Wang appeared in court Monday at a pre-trial hearing.

Bartender-turned-fortune teller Tony Chan was arrested a year ago for allegedly forging the will of Wang, whom he claimed was his lover, after he lost a claim on her estimated $13 billion estate.

Chan arrived at the magistrates' court with his wife and listened calmly as prosecutors and his defence lawyers ironed out technical details on the charges, evidence and the calling of witnesses.

Prosecutors allege Chan, 52, forged the will between October 2006 and April 2007, and then presented it as authentic between 2007 and 2010.

His defence team argued that the alleged forgery had been compromised by forensic testing, and requested a stay on proceedings, according to state-run RTHK news website.

Chan built a career advising clients including Wang -- once Asia's richest woman -- on feng shui, an ancient Chinese belief system based on harnessing natural and spiritual energies.

He lost his high-profile legal campaign for a piece of her estate in 2010 after a court ruled that a will in Chan's possession was a fake.

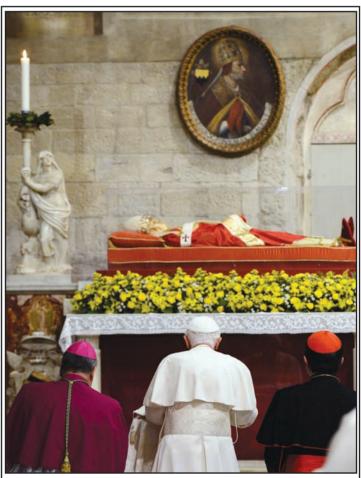

It ruled that the rightful heir to the fortune was the billionaire's charity, which is run by her siblings.

Wang's husband, Teddy, who started the family's Chinachem Group property empire, was abducted in 1990 and declared legally dead in 1999. His body has never been found.

Adorable and affordable; 5 Burgers Aruba offers an island twist to the great American Burger

Expatriates from Boston, Massachusetts, residing on Aruba, Aaron and Rosie Walisever are living their dream: a home on paradise while welcoming all and sundry to their proud undertaking, 5 Burgers Aruba. Some may be quite well acquainted with a nationally known U.S franchise bearing the name "5", and patrons can expect the same great quality between the buns, but an expanded menu and Rosie and Aaron's fanatical dedication to giving their customers what they really want has resulted in a unique menu.

"You never get a second too

chance to make a first impression," comments Aaron; and upon entering 5 Burgers Aruba in The Village Mall in Palm Beach, one is struck by utterly spotless surroundings and a smiling, friendly, attentive service crew. Of course, the main item on the menu is burgers-the way they were meant to be, thick and juicy, made fresh daily and 100% pure beef, the kind that made the hamburger a traditional American treat.

Prices vary only slightly between regular and small (basically 2 patties or 1) with specialty items such as Gouda Burger, Farmer's Burger, Man Burger (almost 12 ounces of choice beef), and a Western Burger with crispy onion rings and BBQ sauce. All of these can be personalized with an incredible array of toppings, (mushrooms, jalapeño peppers, bacon, cheese, lettuce, tomato...whatever the list goes on) at absolutely no extra cost.

5 Burger portions are ENORMOUS! Aaron suggests that even their small serving of fries, which are made from hand-cut fresh Idaho potatoes, is enough to be shared by two. He was very amused to watch a famous French chef demonstrating the best way to make fried potatoes on a gourmet cooking show and could only comment "He stole my recipe!" Try them the English way-with vinegar, and you'll wonder how you ever ate fries without it. This same 5-star chef also swears by Gouda as the best topping for the ideal gourmet cheeseburger.

If you are a fan of crispy friend onion rings, as we are at THE MORNING NEWS, you cannot leave there without trying their secret recipe batterdipped gourmet rings, made from fresh, not frozen onions. Unquestionably, the best we have had anywhere, and for those that like a little spice, the fried jalapeños are a real treat. Aaron and Rosie have expanded their menu to accommodate certain tastes and dietary needs; they offer a tasty grilled chicken sandwich as

EURO 2012 - POLAND - UKRAIN June 8 - July 1

Ukraine face struggle to realise Euro dream

KIEV, (AFP) - Euro 2012 cohosts Ukraine are dreaming of an historic success for a young nation two decades after independence but their hopes are blighted by a tough group and a litany of injury troubles.

The co-hosting of the championships with Poland is the biggest event Ukraine has held since the collapse of the Soviet Union and the team wants to inspire a nation that is still mired in poverty and deeply divided.

However, their mission may remain impossible after being drawn in a tough Group D with England, Euro 2000 winners France and traditionally uncompromising fighters Sweden.

Ukraine manager Oleg Blokhin, a legendary striker in Soviet football, nevertheless said he believed his players are capable of clinching a knockout stage place by upsetting the odds.

"England and France can consider themselves the group's favourites, it's their right," said Blokhin, 59. "But we and, I believe, Sweden have our own view of things.

"We have experience of playing well against France and England. And we will do our best to play with dignity in front of our fans. And I believe their support will give us extra strength.'

Over half a decade after the Orange Revolution inspired hopes of a new beginning for Ukraine, the country is still battling economic crisis and stark divisions between its Russian-speaking east and Ukrainian-speaking west.

Ukraine now has a unique chance to showcase the nation of over 45 million to the world and create a sense of national unity, despite a furore over the jailing of former prime minister Yulia Tymoshenko that has led to threats of an EU boycott.

Ukraine's team remains an unknown quantity as the host country did not need to play in the qualifying tournament and only played friendly matches ahead of the event.

But a 3-3 home draw with three-time World Cup winners Germany, a 2-1 win over Austria and the recent 3-2 victory over Israel gave Ukraine's fans optimism.

Blokhin has brought some fresh blood into his squad while keeping the experienced veterans who formed the Ukrainian team's backbone for Veteran star striker Andriy Shevchenko, forward Andriy Voronin, who was named player of the year in the former Soviet Union region this year, Bayern Munich midfielder Anatoliy Tymoshchuk and goalkeepers Olexander Shovkovskiy and Andriy Pyatov will all be likely included into Blokhin's squad.

Meanwhile, Blokhin can also turn to young stars like Denys Garmash, Andriy Yarmolenko and Maxym Koval from Dynamo Kiev, Yevgen Konoplyanka of Dnepropetrovsk and Yaroslav Rakitskiv of Shakhtar Donetsk.

Ukraine made their first and last appearance in a major finals at the 2006 World Cup in Germany, where they reached the quarter-finals, losing to eventual winners Italy.

But injury worries are already casting a shadow over Blokhin's ambitions: Ukraine's first-choice keeper Andriy Dykan looks likely to be ruled out after sustaining facial injuries in a Russian league match.

Shakhtar Donetsk keeper Olexander Rybka was handed a two-year ban for failing a dope test.

Shakhtar defender Dmytro Chygrynskiy remains uncertain because of an injury, while Shevchenko is battling back to full fitness after a serious back injury.

Burn-out threatens Spain's bid for history

MADRID (AFP) - Spain head to Euro 2012 looking to make history but their bid for a third consecutive major tournament triumph could be hit by fatigue, with top players feeling the effects of several years competing at the highest level.

Spain were the big underachievers of the European game before their triumph at Euro 2008 but having since gone on to win the 2010 World Cup they will be the team to beat in Poland and Ukraine.

No team has ever retained the Henri Delaunay trophy or won three major tournaments on the bounce, even if West Germany came close, losing the 1976 European Championship to Czechoslovakia after previously winning the 1972 Euros and the 1974 World Cup.

There are plenty of reasons why Vicente Del Bosque's side can hope to go all the way this year, though, especially as their leading players know each other inside out and are not lacking in experience.

They also cruised through qualifying, winning all eight games and scoring 26 goals in the process.

"The entire team know that as the reigning European champions the heavy weight of responsibility lies on our shoulders," Del Bosque said re-

"But everyone in the team wants to defend our current position in world football"

However, Del Bosque must solve some major problems if La Roja are to really compete with the youthful exuberance of Germany and the class of the Netherlands, among others.

Chief among those is the fatigue, both physical and mental, which has accumulated over the years of success.

Barcelona's Xavi Hernandez is the man that makes the team tick but he has played an average of almost 70 games a season in the last four years and is being gradually worn down by tendon problems.

And Xavi is far from the only one to have clocked up the kilometres in recent years with little or no rest.

Furthermore, many of Del Bosque's squad will come from Barcelona and Athletic Bilbao, the two clubs who meet in the final of the Copa del Rey on May 25, just 16 days before La Roja's opening game against Italy.

That means Del Bosque will be the last coach to have his whole group of players at his disposal ahead of the tourna-

To compound matters, he has also had to deal with the loss of key players to injury.

Inspirational captain Carles Puyol -- a man who "rouses every player that sees him" in the words of one teammate -is out of the tournament with a knee problem.

Meanwhile, the national team's all-time leading goalscorer David Villa -- scorer of seven goals in qualifying and five in the World Cup finals in South Africa -- has not played at all since breaking a leg in December.

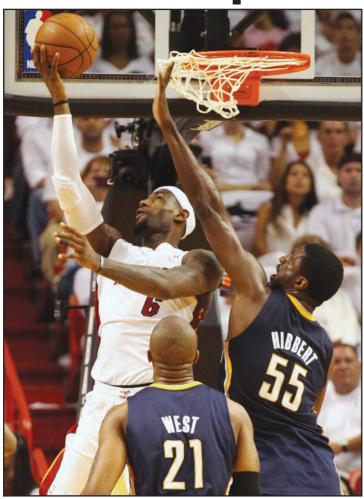

With Fernando Torres still grasping for a semblance of form, Roberto Soldado and Fernando Llorente could be key in attack, while Sergio Ramos is likely to assume Puyol's role in the heart of the defence.

Despite everything, Xavi hopes the momentum built up in recent years can work to Spain's advantage as they prepare to do battle in Group C against Italy, the Republic of Ireland and Croatia.

defeated Indiana 95-86 to take the opening game of their second round playoff series.

James, the game's best player, has won the MVP award three out of the last four years and is chasing his first ever NBA championship.

James also had 15 rebounds and five assists and guard Dwyane Wade had 29 points and four assists, while Chris Bosh added 13 points for the Heat, who also won three of four regular season games over the Pacers.

Forward David West and centre Roy Hibbert scored 17 points each for the much-improved Pacers, who finished off Orlando in five games Tuesday to advance past the first round of the playoffs for the first time since 2005.

Heat forward Bosh suffered a lower abdominal strain shortly before halftime at American Airlines Arena and did not return.

Bosh dunked over the Indiana Pacers' Hibbert and drew the foul with 1:06 remaining in the second quarter, but landed awkwardly on the floor. He made the free throws and left soon after for the dressing room.

The score was even after three quarters, but Miami opened the final quarter with an 8-2 run and never lost the lead after that.

Game two of the best-ofseven series is today in Miami.

Aruban, Stuart Smit wins Bronze Medal in Taekwondo Open in Canada

Last Friday, the Aruban delegation of Taekwondo succeeded in winning their first medal in the Canada Open. Fighter, Stuart Smit won the Bronze Medal.

This Canadian Open boasted the participation of some of the best players from various parts of the world. They were all well prepared on the eve of the upcoming London 2012 Olympic Games.

Aruba's 2010 athlete, Stuart Smit, who currently lives and trains in Holland travelled together with his coach, the Korean Pet, from Holland to Canada. Stuart succeeded in winning two games and also lost two games in the double elimination, thus winning the Bronze Medal.

Stuart's first victory was from Charles Drake of the US, and then he won Jasmel Acosta. Fighting his way into the grand final, Stuart lost to Marc Andr of Canada. He then fought again and lost this fight with Drake Charles of the US in the double elimination, but kept his Bronze Medal.

Much information about the other athletes was not available. Except that Aischal van der Linde was expected to face off with some very prominent fighters Aischal would be fighting the USA and Canadian winner. If she advances to the final she will confront Canadian Yvette Gonda, a Pan-American champion.

The president of Aruba's Taekwondo Bond, Aruban Jose "Chaco" Cornelio, also went to Canada to referee the games. Referee Chaco Cornelio is one of the referees elected by the London 2012 Olympic Games.

Ruud van Nistelrooij quits playing football

Ruud van Nistelrooij has played his last professional football game, the former international confirmed on Monday. Van Nistelrooij, who turns 36 next month, signed a one-year contract with Spanish club Malaga last year. Malaga have iust qualified for the Champions League for the first time in their history. The former Manchester United player told The Sun newspaper: 'Yesterday was my final game as a professional footballer. I wanted to play in the Champions League, but it is the moment to leave. I have arrived at my physical limit and I can't play at the maximum level. I couldn't have had a better send-off than this.' The striker turned out for the Netherlands 70 times and scored 35 international goals.
